Financial distribution of University disclosed
By JANE PAPACCI
New Editor
The University has released information concerning the financial distribution of its revenues, including those generated through financial aid. The student body, in addition to helping the Administration decide which services to provide, has a direct role in financial decision-making. The University allocates funds to various programs, including financial aid and student scholarships. The University's financial decisions are subject to periodic review and scrutiny by various external bodies, including the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency (PHEAA) and the Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education (PASSHE). For more information, please contact the University's Office of Budget and Planning.

Strategic program seeks to improve the University overall

VQI has unique dimensions for the community of the faculty and staff of the University to fully participate and be involved."

Dr. John K. Kelly, Director of University Planning and Budgeting, explained that the VQI program is intended to enhance the quality of education and services at Villanova University. The program is designed to involve all members of the University community, including faculty, staff, and students, in the improvement process. The goals of the VQI program include enhancing student learning, improving faculty and staff development, and increasing the University's financial stability.

Last week, the Social Justice Retreat was held at the farm of the University's President, Dr. John K. Kelly, in Villanova, Pennsylvania. The retreat, which was attended by faculty, staff, and students, focused on issues related to poverty and social justice. "Many retreats are designed to talk about the general topics of poverty and social justice, but this one was unique in that it was held at the farm of our President," said Dr. Kelly.

"The retreat was a unique experience, as it allowed participants to engage in discussions and activities that were directly related to poverty and social justice. It was a powerful reminder of the importance of addressing these issues," said Dr. Kelly.

The death of a prominent professor and former member of the editorial staff of the Villanovaian on Saturday, April 12, 1980, at 75, left the Villanovaian community shocked and saddened. A former Villanovaian sports editor, the late Mr. Alvin A. Clay, was a member of the community for over 30 years.

He was a popular figure in the school and was known for his enthusiasm and dedication to his work. Clay was a lifelong friend of the Villanovaian and was well respected by his colleagues and students.

Clay was a former professor of economics and was also a contributing editor of the Villanovaian. He was a member of the editorial board for over 20 years and was known for his sharp wit and insightful commentary.

Clay was born in Philadelphia and attended Villanova University. He received his B.A. in 1931 and his Ph.D. in 1936 from the University of Pennsylvania. He taught at Villanova University for over 40 years and was a member of the Economics Department.

Clay's contributions to the school included his work on the Villanovaian, where he served as the sports editor for over 30 years. He was a key figure in the development of the newspaper and was known for his strong editorial voice.

Clay was also a respected economist and was known for his work on economic theory. He was a member of the American Economic Association and was a regular contributor to economic journals.

Clay's death was a blow to the Villanovaian community and was mourned by his colleagues and students. He will be greatly missed.

According to Alvin A. Clay, dean of the College of Business Administration at Villanova University, Clay was a man of great integrity and dedication.

"Clay was a man of great integrity and dedication," said Clay. "He was a true scholar and a true friend to the Villanovaian community. He will be greatly missed by all of us."
Phi Kappa Phi hosts science lecture

BY KELANA STARR

A unique opportunity presents itself to the Penn community. The annual lecture series put on by the University of Pennsylvania's Department of Biology, in collaboration with Phi Kappa Phi, is set to feature a lecture by Professor David Putterman. The lecture, titled "Genome Evolution and the Emergence of Species," will be held on Wednesday, February 7, 2018, at 7:30 p.m. in the McEwen Auditorium. The event is free and open to the public.

Putterman is a renowned expert in the field of evolutionary biology and is currently the chair of the Department of Biology at the University of Pennsylvania. His research focuses on the evolution of genomes and the emergence of species, and he has published extensively on these topics. Putterman's lecture will provide an in-depth exploration of the complex processes that lead to the evolution of new species, with a particular emphasis on the role of genome evolution in this process.

The Department of Biology and Phi Kappa Phi are excited to host this lecture, and we encourage all members of the Penn community to attend. This is a unique opportunity to learn from one of the leading experts in evolutionary biology and to gain a deeper understanding of the fascinating processes that underlie the diversity of life on Earth.
Don't be a boob; censor your own tube

From the hard-core realism depicted in the police drama "The Hill" to the exploits of two misguided teenage Territorialists in "Shades of Paradise," the American viewing public has been inundated with graphic violence on television.

Both TV shows have come under fire recently from concerned parents, special interest groups and even members of Congress, many of whom have adopted the "get rid of censor TV violence" campaign as their own personal crusade of repressed American values and the support of their constituents.

Do these depictions of television violence merely mirror what happens in the streets of America everyday, or do they serve to stress and perpetuate a more violent American society? Most theories have been developed to explain this casual association of television and an increase in violent society.

Ultimately, this responsibility should rest with a mature, adult viewing public capable of making its own educational decisions and choices. Thus, this responsibility is slowly being chipped away as television executives make decisions on what is better for the young, without the pressures of commercial advertisers and those with political interests.

In which it is up to us to decide. Both film and television are in any way forms of escapism. These two forms of visual media are stripped away. Perhaps it is time for people to start taking some of the responsibilities of their television viewing choices.

After all, there is no "off switch" or remote control included with most television sets. The manufacturer does not want that. Do you? Or else the term "tube" might just apply to them.

South Campus diners driven insane in brain

We at the Villanova like rap group Cypress Hill as much as the next person. Enough through.

Students eating at the 'Spit on South Campus have encountered a radically new dining experience since returning this semester. The Donahue dining hall has installed a video jukebox which simulates the music videos Villanovans have selected on multiple monitors around the cafeteria.

We applaud Villanovas Food Services for attempting to make students' meals places more enjoyable. However, this installation of MTV-style technology seems to have more drawbacks than advantages. First and foremost, many students are becoming annoyed by the same music plays over and over. Songs by Cypress Hill, Blade Runners, Public Enemy and other less popular bands are being played and would have been best avoided for what little good they have in their compositions.

More South Campus diners have also complained that the loud music makes communication difficult. Students on the meal plan generally look forward to the chance to talk to their friends during the dinner hour. But loud lines and thrashing guitars are not conducive to conversation.

Two solutions could make the video screens more tolerable. The first would be to make the images more recognizable. For those eating in Donovan Dining Hall is not just a good idea for campus residents and the students. Students could have their own personal jukeboxes thanks to this idea.

Correction:

Villanova University has been the beneficiary of a tremendous amount of attention in recent months, due in large part to the media coverage of the school's athletic programs. However, the university has not been invited to participate in the conference on television violence held at the University of Pennsylvania.

The Villanova University team has been hit by a series of injuries recently, including the loss of starting quarterback, Chad Steiner. Steiner was expected to be a key player in the team's high-powered offense, but his absence has been felt in recent games. The team is currently 3-2, but many fans are concerned about the team's future.

What is the worst part about the weather conditions?

Letters

Dear Editor:

I am a sophomore at Villanova University, where I am majoring in history. I am writing to express my concern about the influence of television on students and society as a whole.

Television is a powerful tool that can shape our perceptions and behaviors. However, it is important to remember that television is not the only source of information and entertainment. Many people, especially young people, rely heavily on television for their news and entertainment. This can lead to a lack of critical thinking and an inability to distinguish between fact and fiction.

I believe that it is important for students and society as a whole to be aware of the influence of television and to be critical consumers of the media. This will help us to make informed decisions and to be more aware of the impact that television has on our lives.

Sincerely,

Villanova Feminist Coalition fights stereotypes

In CHRISTINE MULLER

In an effort to address the issue of gender stereotypes, the Villanova Feminist Coalition was established in November 1993. The coalition was formed to challenge the prevalent stereotypes that exist in the media and society. The group aims to promote awareness of the issues and to encourage open dialogue on the topic.

The coalition is made up of students from various disciplines and backgrounds, and it seeks to provide a platform for discussing the impact of gender stereotypes on individuals and society as a whole. By raising awareness and fostering a more inclusive environment, the coalition hopes to encourage a greater understanding and acceptance of diversity.

The coalition's activities include organizing events, workshops, and discussions, as well as engaging with the media to challenge gender stereotypes in news coverage and entertainment. Through these efforts, the coalition seeks to empower students and promote a culture of equity and respect.

Is love blind or clueless?

Like Elizabeth Barretti

Ah, love! Just thinking about it makes my heart sing. It's like a symphony of emotions, a painting that can only be appreciated by those who truly understand it. But what happens when the music ends? When the colors fade away? Is love just a fleeting moment, a dream that soon vanishes into the night?

Our hearts and minds are filled with questions about love. Do we truly know what it is? Is it something we can control, or is it always beyond our grasp? These are the questions that keep us awake at night, pondering the mysteries of the heart.

The truth is, love is a complex emotion. It can be as beautiful as a sunrise, but also as painful as a heartbeat. It can make us feel alive, but also leave us feeling empty and alone. Love is a mystery, and it's one that we will never fully understand.

So let's embrace love, and all its complexities. Let's dance to the music of our hearts, and let the colors of love fill our lives. Even if the music does end, we can still hold onto the memories, the feelings, and the dreams that love has given us. For love is a journey, and we are all on it together.

Alice In Chains keep rock god status

By Michael Woyak

Washington State

"Alice In Chains has been named as one of the top ten rock bands in the world by Rolling Stone magazine. This is the first time a band from Seattle has been included on the list, which is compiled by rock critics and fans. Alice In Chains was formed in 1987 by singer Layne Staley and guitarist Jerry Cantrell. The band's debut album, Facelift, was released in 1990 and has sold over 5 million copies worldwide. Their second album, Dirt, was released in 1992 and reached #5 on the Billboard 200 chart. The band's third album, Sap, was released in 1995 and reached #4 on the Billboard 200 chart. In 1997, Layne Staley was found dead in his Seattle home. The band continued on without him, releasing their latest album, Dirtbox, in 2006. The album reached #17 on the Billboard 200 chart and has sold over 800,000 copies in the United States. Alice In Chains is currently on tour in Europe, and their next album is expected to be released in 2014."

The Tao of Pooh makes Tao accessible

By PATTY WRIGHT

The Tao of Pooh: A Guide for Modern Living by Benjamin Hoff is a book that introduces the ancient Chinese philosophy of Taoism in a modern and accessible way. The book is known for its humorous tone and practical advice, making the complex ideas of Taoism understandable to a wide audience. Hoff explains the principles of Taoism through everyday situations and common experiences, making the philosophy relevant and relatable. The book is divided into sections, each focusing on a particular aspect of life, from relationships and work to creativity and spirituality. It encourages the reader to find balance and harmony in their lives, just as the Taoists did in ancient China. The Tao of Pooh has been a popular and influential book, inspiring many people to explore the teachings of Taoism and apply them to their own lives.
'Shadowlands' displays love and death

By JOSEPH E. MCCABE

tough many film reviewers described the original 1946 hit, "Great Expectations," as Tragedy, the 1984 film version of "Great Expectations" may be more accurately described as "Shadowlands." Based on the stage play about the life of the British novelist C.S. Lewis and the Jewish New York Times reporter, also C.S. Lewis, it is quite simply the best movie of the year in terms of acting and writing.

The movie begins in the 1920s, when C.S. Lewis, a respected professor of English,

Billy Pilgrim debut bores

By MIKE BUCKERICH

Billy Pilgrim's self-titled debut is a real back to basics concept: a band of four, two of whom are brothers, their second album is a return to the kind of songwriting full of emotional lyrics that made them popular in the first place.

The songs are sung in a manner similar to his previous work, with the exception of "This Is Love," which is less about the story of love and more about the conflict between love and hate.

"Shadowlands" may be too small a film to carry the heavy bag of "a masterpiece," but it makes for a kind of "a masterpiece." It's a romantic movie that can be enjoyed as a popcorn flick, but it also has its moments. It manages to be both a love story and a true-to-life account of one of the most compelling pictures of the year.

Orangemen crush Cats in Dome, 87-68

By ALEX SCOFIELD

Few straight years, it was the Wildcats Game away from home Syracuse University could boast a winning record. But last season, the Orangemen had the upper hand as they claimed a 13-10 lead in the series. This season, however, the Wildcats were vengeful and took a 2-0 lead in the first half. Syracuse was able to come back and win the game, 87-68.

The Orangemen had a dominant first-half performance, putting up 41 points against the Wildcats' 23. In the second half, the Wildcats came back and managed to score 46 points to Syracuse's 46. However, it was not enough to overcome the Orangemen's strong performance in the first half.

Despite the loss, the Wildcats remained in the game and kept it close until the end. The game was played to the fullest, with both teams showing their best skills on the court. The Orangemen's lead was never in doubt, and they managed to secure the win with a comfortable margin of 21 points.

Women down Hoyas and Orangowomen

By TODD LEKANIC

Syracuse University's women's basketball team dominated the Hoyas and Orangowomen, winning both games by large margins. In the first game, the Orangowomen emerged victorious with a 73-48 score. In the second game, the Hoyas were defeated 84-46.

In the first game, the Orangowomen were able to build up an early lead and maintain it throughout the game. The Hoyas were unable to overcome the Orangowomen's strong performance and were eventually defeated.

In the second game, the Hoyas were unable to keep up with the Orangowomen's high-scoring performance. The Hoyas were outscored by 38 points and were left with a disappointing loss.

Despite the losses, both teams showed their competitive spirit and played their best throughout the games. The Orangowomen's strong performance and the Hoyas' fighting spirit made for exciting games that were enjoyed by fans and players alike.
